THE MCKINLEY VOTE.

In a statement eminently fair and candid Gen. Grosvenor shows by figures which cannot be successfully disputed that the nomination of Maj. McKinley is assured beyond peradventure, and, moreover, on the first ballot, if the delegates chosen to the national convention vote as in duty bound. Gen. Grosvenor is not disposed to question the honesty of purpose of the delegates who have been instructed or have otherwise declared themselves for the Napoleon of Protection, and in this his action should appeal to the best instincts of delegates who may be wavering or disposed to double-dealing, if there are any such. There need be no fear of the outcome of the convention's action, however. Gen. Grosvenor's table and the votes which he has in reserve provide for all contingencies, and the third week in June next will see Maj. William McKinley, Jr., the acknowledged candidate and leader of the Republican party of the nation, the second stage of a triumphal march to the White House.

PUBLIC OPINION HAS CHANGED.

It is admitted, even by the most prejudiced observers, that the sentiment of this community in regard to the harbor question has changed very decidedly during the past week or two, that is, the sentiment of that comparatively small class of our citizens, outside of the ranks of the railroad employees and railroad hangers-on, who favor what is erroneously known as the "double-harbor" proposition. It could scarcely be otherwise, considering the nefarious actions of those who have been engaged in trying to boost the Huntington harbor scheme, under the pretense that it was a good thing for Los Angeles to tie itself up hand and foot to a railroad corporation and sacrifice its chance of foreign commerce. When our people saw wholesale forgery resorted to by the local organ of the Southern Pacific Company it was evident to the dullest intellect that the cause that needed such bolstering as this was a bad one, and against the interests of the people. The discovery of the daring and outrageous forgeries organized in the Los Angeles Evening Express office have caused most of those few citizens who favored the Santa Monica scheme to come out on the other side. Only yesterday one of them, who has been a rather ardent advocate of Santa Monica, was heard to say that since the discovery of this brazen attempt to influence Congress by forging petitions, his opinion has so entirely changed that he now believed it would be better for us to wait ten years for a harbor rather than take the site which Mr. Huntington has been trying to cram down our throats.

If anything were needed to convert those few citizens who still incline to favor the Santa Monica site, it is furnished in the official report of the hearing before the Senate Committee of Commerce, just received. No impartial person can read that document without being convinced that a desperate and reprehensible attempt has been made to bamboozle and deceive the Senate Committee in the interest of a greedy and grasping corporation. The fraud has not even stopped with this, for in one of the petitions printed in this document, favorable to the government site, the word "Santa Monica" has been substituted for San Pedro. It would well repay the friends of San Pedro to obtain and circulate copies of this report, from which copious extracts are given in today's Times.

This exhibit will be followed tomorrow by the minority report of Senator White—an able and convincing document.

A PROMINENT RECRUIT.

Major Strong of New York is the latest prominent recruit enrolled in the McKinley ranks. In an interview published in the New York Press he says: "I am inclined to believe that he will be nominated before the first roll-call is finished. Loyal as I am to Gov. Morton, New York's favorite son, and proud as I would be to see him get the nomination, I feel as assured as one can be that with McKinley as our nominee the Republican party will sweep the State of New York by a majority greater than has ever been given to a Republican nominee for the Presidency."

There are good reasons for believing that Mayor Strong knows what he is talking about, when he says the Republicans with McKinley at their head will sweep the State of New York. It will be a victory nobly won.

Mr. Platt of New York must be losing his nerve; he is growing satirical. Satire is an excellent weapon in the hands of a man conscious of his strength, but a dangerous one to the wielder when there are flaws in his own cuirass. He has been treating the public to an interesting dissertation on "bosses," "bossism," and the duties of bosses generally, in the course of which he said: "Those in touch with the people and who carefully strive to act as wise leaders (this means him) are not concerned as to the outcome of the St. Louis convention. The would-be bosses may well be alarmed, for in the end calm reason must assert its sway and the right must, therefore, surely prevail." Mr. Platt is one of those peculiarly composite individuals who possess, in a marked degree, what Zangwill, the English critic, defines as sub-consciousness. He seems to be perfectly conscious of what should be done, but at the same time is powerless to do it.

The special correspondent at Washington of the Chicago Record writes that there is good reason to believe that twenty out of the sixty-four delegates from Pennsylvania will bolt Quay from the beginning, and, perhaps twenty-four. He further says: "There are a great many people in Philadelphia who think that Quay's name will not go before the convention at all." It is already sufficiently evident that were it not for Senator Quay's entangling alliance with Mr. Platt of New York he would come forward and boldly announce himself for McKinley and protection.

Perhaps the City Council of Los Angeles and the Mayor intend to run for office in Santa Monica this fall. We had not thought of that. But even in Santa Monica, there are a good many men who, while favoring that site for a harbor, do not approve of such an underhand trick as that resorted to by the Council in passing the resolution favoring Mr. Huntington's site.

There is no doubt that much of the support gained by Huntington for his harbor steal is secured by just such jobs as the trading of votes on the proposition for votes to seat Col. Dupont in the Senatorial vacancy from Delaware. That these are the methods by which great questions are determined is one of the most glaring disgraces of the practice of politics in this country, as exemplified in the Congress of the United States. If Col. Dupont is entitled to a seat in the Senate on the merits of the case, he should be seated, but if he is to gain his position at the expense of honesty, decency and the general good of the people by the success of the railroad in this harbor matter, then Col. Dupont of Delaware should remain a private citizen of that commonwealth for the remainder of his natural life. The swapping of votes and the putting up of "protections" in political conventions is bad enough, but the line certainly ought to be drawn right there. The Senate of the United States should do business on business principles, and be above trafficking in such dirty deals as the one referred to above.

Senator White has had an opportunity to show the metal he is made of—an opportunity granted to few men of an upper house of Congress in the last twenty years, and he has done so with masterly ability. His arraignment of Huntington and his hired men has been scathing to a degree, and the proposed lot of the public treasury has been given a set-back that will be found difficult to recover from. Mr. White continues his speech today, and will doubtless be heard to express himself on the shameful frauds and forgeries that have been practiced in this city in connection with the Santa Monica harbor petitions and the less unspeakable Carrere and the two of a kind who have been attempting to sell out this community to the Kentucky corporation. Senator White has proven himself the staunch friend of the people of his State and of the nation. He has won a garland of glory in this great fight, and has earned the undying gratitude of the honest men in all parties.

Holmes, the archmurderer, recently sold a lengthy "confession" to that rising young "journalist," Mr. Hearst, for a fat sum of money, in which he acknowledged to some twenty-seven killings, but the announcement is made that the only slum-pore confession is to reach Chief Badenoch of the Chicago police some time this week. Evidently young Mr. Hearst has been buncoed, or else has been working a fake on his readers. In either event his latest bit of journalistic enterprise does not shine as an alarming and dazzling amount of sparkle.

Mr. Manley, Mr. Reed's prime minister and extraordinary political adviser-in-general, is still continuing, confabing and confabulating with Messrs. Platt and Clarkson. They keep on whetting their blades at stated intervals, but they cannot find a weak spot in the McKinley armor in which to plunge them. They are desirous of committing murder—political murder—and yet they fall to see that in hunting for their victim they are themselves committing political suicide.

The Reed boom in Rhode Island has departed this life beyond all hope of resurrection. There will be others. In the mean time Gov. Lippitt of that State has telegraphed Maj. McKinley his congratulations on his recent victories. This fact, in conjunction with the other, that all the Rhode Island delegates have now sworn allegiance to the cause of protection, "may be taken as clearly indicating for whom the vote of that State will be cast at the convention.

The enemies of Maj. McKinley, who are hoping to embroil Senator Foraker in some sort of a fight with the Ohio statesman who is to be the next President of this country, are having their labor for their pains. Mr. Foraker does not propose to commit political suicide, and he states plainly and emphatically that he is going to the convention for McKinley as yet to such a degree that he has no choice for second place.

St. Petersburg society is agitated by the Czarina's order forbidding ladies and women servants from smoking in the palace. But the Czarina does not say the ladies may not chew, so we may soon expect to hear that seductive fiasco and the succulent plug have taken the place of "cotton balls" in the palaces of the Czar.

The previous politicians are already constructing cabinets for President McKinley, an occupation which will take up a goodly portion of their time until next March. But the major will doubtless have something to say about the personnel of his advisers when the time comes. He will go into office the freest President that was ever elected.

It is satisfactory to note that Senator Quay does not take any prominent part in the conferences being held by Messrs. Platt, Clarkson and Manley to evolve some plan to defeat the nomination of Maj. McKinley. Senator Quay does not hesitate to express his opinion, but he has an aversion to playing the role of the spadassin.

William P. St. John of New York is proposing an independent party with free coinage as its foundation stone. There is one man in Kansas who had a party. As our old friend Hans Brettingham would say: "Who is that boy now?"

The woman suffragists may well gloat while they may over their victory in getting a plank in the Republican State platform. Let them gloat early, for after the voters get a whack at the proposition it will not be the turn of the sisters to gloat, but the other fellows.

The Evening Express says: "No liberal-minded citizen owning property in the proposed district of assessment doesn't want Broadway hill tunneled." The Evening Express uses a breed of grammar that sometimes makes it go back upon itself.

The Christian Church building at Santa Rosa will soon be finished inside. The exterior presents a fine appearance and the interior is nearly ready for occupancy. The auditorium is one of the most compact in Santa Rosa and the most properties are unexcelled. The dedication will probably be held on Sunday, May 17.

Rev. Charles E. Jefferson of Chelsea, Mass., has been elected to the position of pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Oakland. A telegram has been received from him stating that he had concluded not to resign from his present pastorate.

It is reported that Rev. A. H. House of Coifax, Wash., will build a Baptist church at New Pines City, Idaho, this spring.

The Rev. J. Cumming Smith recently celebrated the eighth anniversary of his installation as pastor of the Trinity Presbyterian Church at San Francisco.

Sermon for Dead Nuts.
Rev. Job Turner of Virginia, a traveling missionary for dead nuts, preached yesterday in St. Paul's Guild room, taking as his text, 1 Thes. 4, 1-18. The audience was deeply interested in Mr. Turner's explanation.

Y.M.C.A. Services.
After some excellent music by the orchestra and congregation, Rev. N. T. Edwards, pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church, was introduced, and gave the address at the Y.M.C.A. meeting. His theme was, "God's Reasonable Requirements."

Tobacco-tainted Meat Poisonous.
An inspector of meat in Paris has been experimenting on tobacco as a flavoring for meat, and he finds that the results are peculiarly deadly. A dog, when offered the tempting morsel of thin slices of beef which had been subjected to tobacco fumigation, declined the delicacy emphatically. But when the meat was cut up and concealed within bread the dog was betrayed, and suffered in consequence. Twenty minutes after eating the food it displayed distressing symptoms and died in great agony.

FIELD OF POLITICS.

Mayor Strong of New York Comes Out for McKinley.

Mr. Platt Gives a Dissertation on "Bosses."

Ohio's Governor on the Present Situation of the Country.

(New York Special to Chicago Inter Ocean, May 4.) Mayor Strong has ambled into the McKinley chariot. He says that McKinley looks like a winner, hands down. The ruler of this city has returned from the West firm in the belief that the Ohio man will be nominated by acclamation and elected. The doctrine of protection, he thinks, is going to swing all thinking workingmen in the Republican ranks. He visits to Cleveland, O., was entirely personal and non-political, but he gathered such a strong impression on his journey of the growth of the McKinley boom, not only in Pennsylvania and Ohio, but in New York, that he no longer hesitates to avow his belief that McKinley will be nominated by acclamation, and what is more, will sweep the State of New York on a Republican tidal wave.

What Mayor Strong Says.

(Chicago Inter-Ocean Special, May 4.) The New York Press will say tomorrow, quoting Mayor Strong: "My observations in Cleveland and the manly character of the people of Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York have confirmed an impression that New York is at least as good a protection State as any other in the Union. I believe election next November will see the Empire State permanently enrolled by the nation in the protectionist column, where it belongs."

"I have just returned from the scene of a tremendous political manifestation as has been witnessed in the United States. I mean Ohio, where the hearts of the women and the minds of the men are surcharged with enthusiasm for and confidence in McKinley. When I was in Cleveland to attend the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce, the news of the action of the Ohio convention seemed to bring the McKinley enthusiasm almost to fever heat, and it was this I think, that so forcibly impressed on me the idea that McKinley is the man for the people—here in New York, as well as in his home State. I am inclined to believe that he will be nominated before the first roll-call is finished. Loyal as I am to Gov. Morton, New York's favorite son, and proud as I would be to see him get the nomination, I feel assured that he will be nominated before our own nominating party meets to sweep the State of New York by a majority greater than has ever been given to a Republican nominee for the Presidency."

Ohio's Governor on the Situation.

(Cleveland, O., May 4.—Special to Toledo Blade.) Gov. Bushnell who is here today, furnished some interesting information regarding the matter of presenting McKinley's name to the St. Louis convention. "Foraker," he said, "will nominate McKinley, and the people will do the rest. The Senator told me some time ago that McKinley had written him a letter asking him to make the nomination. Foraker very promptly replied that it would give him pleasure to do so, and thus the matter was settled. McKinley has now only a few weeks before the Republican State convention. As to who will second the nomination, I don't know. I understand that he will be asked to do so, but I don't know. We are all for McKinley and prosperity."

The governor added that as Governor he was working harder than ever before. "Do you regard McKinley's nomination as certain, Governor?" was asked him. He replied: "Yes, I think there can be no doubt about it. I think that as we have the McKinley forces. It is true that there is about a month and a half before the convention, but I think that now any possible doubt can be hatched up to defeat him. The fact of the matter is that the bulk of the people want McKinley, and they will follow him. When McKinley is nominated he will be elected just as easily as he secured the nomination in the same manner, which makes the Republican party desire to make him its standard-bearer will make the people at large desire to elect him to the Presidential chair, and they will do it."

Kohlstaedt's Course.

(New York Mail and Express.) McKinley's most conspicuous supporter in the West is H. H. Kohlstaedt, proprietor of the Chicago Times-Herald, who has been the champion of McKinley absolutely uncompromising western champion of the gold standard. When he took hold of the Times-Herald a year ago, the free-silver heresy was sweeping the West like wildfire. Every newspaper in Chicago was more or less tainted with it. The Times-Herald itself, under the editorship of the late James W. Scott, had trimmed its sails to the free-silver wind. Mr. Kohlstaedt turned the helm at once, and from the day when he took hold made "opposition" to the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 or any other ratio by his country along the first of his editorial directions. "He ordered Controller Eckels a salary of $10,000 to be his financial editor. Prof. Laughlin, of the University of Chicago, gold-bug of gold bugs, was given free run of the editorial columns, and filled them with assaults upon "Coin" and his school, which were the feature of western journalism for three months and which fairly silenced the financial heretics. Mr. Kohlstaedt has never lost an opportunity to rend the fight for sound money, McKinley or no McKinley, and has never hesitated to say that he would not support McKinley himself on a free-coinage platform.

MCKINLEY THE MAN.

Lincoln, Grant and McKinley—Names that Stir the Popular Heart.
(New York Mail and Express.) On July 17, 1895, the Mail and Express predicted the nomination of William McKinley for President in 1896. Today we predict his nomination by acclamation. There is something in the very name of McKinley which moves the popular heart. The names of Lincoln and Grant possessed the same mystic power with the people. The nation has been blessed and adorned with characters as great, and nature as rich, and lives as fruitful, but without lacking this mysterious quality called personal magnetism, which appeals directly to the affections of the masses and secures support without solicitation. It was the subtle sorcery of a great name, that stood for something in the world, which led the French soldier who with a wound near the heart, was being operated upon on the field of battle, to reply to the surgeon's inquiry, "Where is Napoleon?" "Cut an inch deeper, sir, and you will find him."

The secret of William McKinley's almost unprecedented popularity is his personal integrity, his genuine and enthusiastic Americanism, and his patriotic and unselfish public service. The unfortunate modern distinction between a statesman and a political leader does not apply to him. It is true that he is not a politician in the ordinary sense of that term. But this fact only increases the respect and affection with which the people regard him. It is not the friend or flatterer of political bosses, much less is he the apologist for or acquiescent in the misdeeds of any beginning of his remarkable canvass he selected as his adviser a private citizen, who has no political aspirations and no compromising alliances with factional intriguers and professional place hunters.

It cannot be denied that William McKinley is today, and undoubtedly will be on June 16 next, the people's candidate for the Presidency of this great nation. This is true in a preeminent case. It was never more true of any other candidate for the high office in the history of this government. Neither can it be candidly denied that he combines more elements of greatness and support than has any other candidate. He is not only the popular favorite, but also distinctly the national candidate. He represents neither a faction nor a section. He has the combined support of the high school country, the counting-room and the cotton field, the factory and the farm. Labor and capital are equally enthusiastic in their acknowledgment of his able and faithful advocacy of their best interests, and poor and rich alike regard him as the champion of their mutual welfare demands his nomination and election.

William McKinley is today the candidate of all classes, all factions and all sections, because he is the foremost champion of the great American doctrine of protection, the most formidable opponent of those un-American tariff linkers who would wreck the prosperity of the nation and the industries and energies of the people for the sake of dangerous and disastrous experiments in impracticable theories. The election of McKinley, and his nomination will mean his election will result in the nation to the proud pride in the world's march of material enrichment, industrial achievement and political advancement. Behind him are the forces of progress, of the future, of the world's march of material enrichment, industrial achievement and political advancement. Behind him are the forces of progress, of the future, of the world's march of material enrichment, industrial achievement and political advancement.

The McKinley platform is protection for American citizens, at home and abroad; respect for the American flag in whatever breeze it waves; a sound and stable national currency as determined by the highest standard of value recognized by the great monetary and commercial powers of the world, and such international reciprocal trade relations as will stimulate our foreign commerce without sacrificing our domestic industries. This is a winning platform.

Mr. Platt on "Bosses."

(New York Special to Chicago Tribune, May 4.) "These bosses against 'bosses' and 'bossism' evidently seek to regard Mr. Hanna as a single-minded citizen, devoted to the public welfare, while they consider Mr. Quay as an unscrupulous boss. They look upon Gen. Powell Clayton of Arkansas in the light of a simple business man, but Gen. Clarkson is the embodiment of 'bossism' in Iowa. They see that the Cattle of Kansas is an unscrupulous granger, and with the same eyes they discover that Mr. Manley 'bosses' things in Maine."

"I am held up as a terrible example of the 'boss,' but Cornelius N. Bliss is a gentleman whose presence would be a disgrace to politics as a remarkable instance of self-sacrifice. There are no 'bosses' in Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, Georgia, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Wisconsin, etc. Only leaders' abound in those blessed Commonwealths, and the leaders there have a heaven-sent right to induce the people to take their own candidate, whoever he may be."

"Those in touch with the people and who carefully strive to act as wise leaders (this means him) are not concerned as to the outcome of the St. Louis convention. The would-be bosses may well be alarmed, for in the end calm reason must assert its sway and the right must, therefore, surely prevail."

Rhode Island's Governor.

(Providence, R. I., Special to Toledo Blade, May 4.) Gov. Lippitt has sent a telegram to Hon. William McKinley congratulating him upon the remarkable turn of popular opinion in his favor. The local Reed boom is at an end, a sudden collapse has occurred, and the leaders and the delegates are out for McKinley. The machine Republicans have been in communication with Manley and others, and they are all agreed that they made a big mistake when they set up caucuses and conventions in this industrial section for the purpose of leading the Republican who had much to do with the Reed hurrah at the State convention to choose delegates last month. He declared that "McKinley talks." He said the money of the whole country appeared to be behind McKinley, and while little or nothing was being put out for Reed. Many influential and wealthy Republicans are gratified at the present attitude of the Rhode Island delegation, and particularly with the fact that Gov. Lippitt and ex-Gov. Brown, both of whom are local manufacturers and candidates for the State, are now showing him the man from Maine were nominated for President.

CAMPAIGN SHOTS.

(Chicago Tribune.) Mr. Cleveland's malady may be diagnosed as fatty degeneration of the third ventricle of the brain. (Denver Times.) Mr. Cleveland can use his baby carriage for a third-term band-wagon.

(Toledo Blade.) The signs of the times indicate the growth of the "St. Louis bosses" idea has received a sharp check. (Washington Post.) This thing of riding into office on two sides of an issue will sooner or later cause an accident to the riders.

(Chicago Record.) Mr. Platt timed his remarks about "wobbly" candidates so that they would come right in the height of the McKinley excitement. (Arizona Republican.) Mr. Russell does not want the Presidential nomination, but rather than appear rude and ungrateful, he would accept it.

(Chicago Tribune.) Mr. Brice is not at all certain he wants to buy Ohio this year. There is a cloud on the title. (New York Commercial Advertiser.) The Hon. Mark Hanna is now dealing with himself whether to gobble it by acclamation or first take a ballot by way of an anchovy.

(San Bernardino Times-Index.) With California in line for McKinley his nomination seems as certain as the meeting of the St. Louis convention. (St. Louis Globe-Democrat.) The Democrats have one advantage this year, at any rate. They can do what they please in their national convention without any danger of forfeiting a chance of success.

(New York Mail and Express.) The trouble with the Presidential Trust, limited, is that it is an object of popular distrust, unlimited. (San Francisco Bulletin.) Carlisle, Patterson and Russell are put forward to mark the advance of Cleveland to a third term, it is said, but it will not do. There are not enough of them.

(New York Mail and Express.) Young Russell is giving the ball as it has had determined to knock the ball clear over the fence, but the chances are that he will simply make a sacrifice hit.

hoping to bring the fat man now on second base around to third.

(Chicago Record.) The problem now troubling the minds of some of Tom Reed's advisers is the question whether it would not be more graceful to present McKinley with a pair of delegates than to have McKinley snap up the delegates without being asked. (New York Mail and Express.) Returning from the conventions in Illinois and Vermont prove that the Republican contest is all over but for the shouting. There is nothing for Platt, Quay, Callum and Manley to do but sit on the fence and cheer the procession.

To Save Two Cents.

(Chicago Post.) He looked at his commutation ticket and swore softly to himself.

"What's the matter?" inquired his wife.

"I put a postage stamp in my pocket-book," he replied, "and it's stuck to my commutation ticket."

"Oh, well, the ticket is still good, isn't it?" she asked.

"Good," he exclaimed. "Of course, it's good, but you don't suppose I'm going to furnish a soulless corporation like a railroad with ready-made stamps, do you? You don't imagine I'll submit to a tax of 2 cents for buying the ticket! You don't seem to grasp the situation. I'm the one who has the kick coming, not the railroad company."

"You don't believe I'd bother about it, John," she said, pleasantly. "If the conductor will accept the ticket, I'd."

"You'd pay the company a bonus for carrying you," he interrupted. "But I won't! It's the principle of the thing that I object to, not the paltry financial consideration."

"Can't you get the stamp off with a knife?" she asked.

"Certainly," he replied, sarcastically. "I cut out with a knife or a pair of scissors, or it might be done with an ax or a chisel, but you forget that I want to save the ticket. The railroad company is making enough out of me when I ride after paying the regular rate of fare."

"Then soak it off," she suggested.

"Now, you're beginning to have a little glimmer of sense," he returned. "I thought you would get around to my idea if I gave you plenty of time."

It was two hours later that she asked him how long he intended to leave that ticket in his pocket.

"Great mackerel!" he cried, and after he had looked at what was left of the ticket and done a little figuring, he added: "Two dollars and thirty cents for a 2-cent stamp. It isn't worth it!"

Evolution of Dress.

(Chicago Post.) "The study of the evolution of women's dress brings up some very interesting thoughts," he said as he laid aside the fashion magazine.

She looked at him suspiciously, but made no reply. If he wished to make one of his sarcastic flings at women she had to have to do without any help from her.

"It's not so long ago," he continued, "that the bigger and fuller a gown was and the more skirts there were to the outfit the more fashionable it was. It was wonderful to think that woman had grown up to that standard from a big leaf. And now—"

"Well, what now?" she asked, her curiosity overcoming her caution.

"Now," he said, "it looks very much as if we were getting near the final stage again."

The Times

ALL ALONG THE LINE.

The annual picnic is abroad in the land. Tempted forth by the warm and bright sunshine, the foreign-born citizens of Los Angeles make their way to some little garden just out of town, there to gossip and dance and drink beer all through a long, pleasant Sunday. There were two such affairs yesterday.

Bicycle races for women do not seem to be a howling success, or any other sort of success, in this part of the civilized world. A meagre handful of persons witnessed the alleged female racing at Athletic Park last Saturday, and the entire affair was conceded to be a simon-pure fake, with not even enough snap about it to make it worth denouncing.

Solomon in all his glory was humbly arrayed when compared with feminine Los Angeles in its spring gown and bonnet. The only trouble is that feminine Los Angeles seems to find it difficult to preserve a due sense of the eternal fitness of things, and the streets and churches are apt to look as though a fancy ball had been scattered abroad into the light of day.

Men may come and men may go, but the wheel goes on forever. Accidents happen now and again; ordinances to compel the use of bell and lamp are enacted every once in awhile, but still the noiseless steel scoots on through light and dark, and woe to the hapless pedestrian who chances to get in the way. Bicyclists should be treated like the electric cars and drivers of horses, and their speed in the crowded part of the city regulated by laws strictly enforced.

The catchy slang phrase, "I don't think," which has enabled many a man of mediocre ability to pose, by ill use, as quite cunning and very worldly-wise, was supposed to be a thoroughly modern example of slang as "who is spoke," but the reverse is true. Slang connoisseurs will be interested to know that "Tom Brown," that famous English school boy, once remarked to his friend, "Goud" East, that a certain "tag," who swore tremendously, under the provocation of forcible detention by Brown & East, was "a nice, well brought-up boy—I don't think!"

Commander Booth-Tucker is amusing in his attitude to be facetious. He rejoined his wife in public at San Francisco on Wednesday, and said to his audience: "It's awful after being separated for three weeks, for us to meet in public like this; but I understand you Californians are a free-and-easy people, and I just took it for granted, and kissed her before you all. . . . I am delighted with what I have seen in America and have already taken out my articles of war, or whatever you call one's first papers, with a view to becoming one of its citizens." Dear boy, this is awfully kind of you, don't know. Oh, how it makes us love you! That you, a Briton—an army Briton, should thus condescend to think of being a United States citizen. Booth-Tucker, old boy, shake!

A revival of genuine sport in Los Angeles is no doubt a thing to be desired, as the most of the pastimes which engage the attention of the amateur athlete, seem to have fallen into a state of "innocuous desuetude," to use a somewhat familiar phrase and interest in the "manly art," the "national game," and divers other forms of fun is well-nigh at the minimum. What seems to be needed, is for the men who have the sportsman's spirit, with some cash and the confidence of the public, to take the initiative in the matter of awakening interest in every legitimate sport of athletic games, and there is small doubt but that a hearty response would be given by the scores of men in this city, whose sporting instincts need but to be aroused to secure their cooperation in any project having for its end the advancement of true sport.

KILLED BY A KICK.

Violent Horse Causes the Death of Alva Hewes.

An accident of a very unusual kind resulted in the sudden death of Alva Hewes at Redondo Saturday evening. Hewes has been working on the ranch of Adolph Lencinger near Redondo. Saturday evening he told his employer he wanted to go down to the town for a while and asked if he might take a horse to ride. Lencinger at once gave his permission and told Hewes to go out into the corral and catch an animal for himself.

Then Lencinger went to bed and thought no more of his farm hand. Yesterday morning Lencinger had just stepped outside his door when some young man called to him that there was a dead man in the corral. Lencinger hurried there and found Hewes lying dead upon the ground. On the skin right over the heart were the marks of two horse's hoofs. The explanation of the man's death is that he entered the corral and tried to catch a horse. The vicious animal kicked at him with both feet, hitting Hewes directly over the heart. The terrible shock caused instant death, rupturing the heart.

Hewes is a young man, with a brother living at Redondo.

CHILD MUSICIAN.

A RICHLY-GIFTED LITTLE GERMAN GIRL.

Seven-year Old Paloma Schramm Composes Music—She Plays Chopin and Schubert—Lives in a Century-old Adobe—Her Pigeons and Dolls.

In the pretty suburb of Vernon, in a quaint old adobe dwelling, lives Paloma Schramm, a little girl who will some day be a great artist, for all who have heard her play, from Paderewski down, say that she is endowed with those things that go to the making of the true musician.

The little girl's home is on the corner of Wadsworth and Austin streets, a long, low house of adobe, which tradition says was built 127 years ago. It is a story and a half in height, with a steep roof, covered with moss-grown shingles, which comes down so as to shelter two broad porches, one on each side of the dwelling. Along the two sides of the yard which front on streets are rows of tall eucalyptus trees, in all their varying shades of gray and green, with acacias mixed in. The garden is filled with orange trees and clumps of bright geraniums. A gnarled old grapevine clammers upon the porch roof and the fourth on the south side of the yard is embowered in honeysuckle. At the back of the yard shoots up a great eucalyptus tree, and between two fine little ways off stands a tall windmill, the top of the big wheel seventy-five feet from the ground. It is a picture-like place.

Yesterday a Times reporter went to see Paloma Schramm. He was ushered into a pleasant, low-ceilinged room, into which the afternoon sun was streaming through windows set in a two-foot thickness of adobe wall. The child's father, C. F. W. Schramm, is a musician, a native of Northern Prussia, who has been in America since 1862. Her mother comes from Holslein. Neither one has any great musical training, but both have the national fondness for music and appreciation of it. Mr. Schramm plays the piano, violin and the guitar, so Paloma has always lived in an atmosphere of music. The only other member of the family is Carla, a five-year-old girl.

The visit was made a moment then in came in Paloma Schramm, a pretty, blue-eyed, fair-haired child of 7. The sleeves of her pink frock, which reached to the elbow, showed two plain little arms, as brown as a berry. She had been playing in the garden with her sister, and her feet were bare. With charming friendliness, she extended her hand, then took her seat at the piano, ready to play without being urged or teased.

The child is so tiny that she cannot reach the pedals of an ordinary piano, so her father, one of those people who can turn their hand to anything, has made a contrivance which can be placed over the pedals so that her feet, resting on it, can move them readily. What did this child play first? A little finger exercise, a selection from Kuhlau or Clementi, a popular air? No, but Liszt's transcription of the "Liedchen Melodien." By Schubert, not a version of it with all the hard places smoothed away, but the real thing. She did not play in the gentle tinkling of the ordinary pianist, but with a wealth of expression and varying tone-colors. Now a heavy note boomed out with more power than one would have believed possible from such tiny fingers, then came a passage with tender melody. It was all in perfect time, with no stumbling or halting over difficult passages, but perfect ease and smoothness.

She played on and on, a rapt look coming into her face as she forgot all the rest of the world. The child was so small that she is forced to bend to one side to reach the high notes or the ones deep in the bass. The child was wholly absorbed in the music, quite unconscious of herself. As she played she nodded her head and swayed her little body with the natural grace of a bird a-tit in the branches, pouring out its song.

The selections Paloma played were of very different character. Now it was Liszt's nocturne, "Liebestraume," now a waltz by Moszkowski, again a nocturne by Chopin, and then a Norwegian air from Grieg. Then she began to improvise and worked out a theme of her own, with all manner of dainty embellishments. "Oh, that's from Liszt," she exclaimed in German, as a few familiar notes stole into her improvisation.

When Paloma Schramm was only 3 years old she manifested a remarkable ear for music. She would sing correctly the air her father played on his guitar. It was about two years ago her parents first realized what a genius the child was. Mr. Schramm took her to hear Emma Lucie and her company singing "Lohengrin." The next morning the child was able to repeat all the choruses of the opera. Paloma's parents bought a piano for her benefit and her father taught her the first rudiments of music. In two months time she could stand in one room with her eyes shut and when someone struck the piano in the adjoining room could tell just what notes had been struck. When the bees swarmed, she told her father they hummed in B flat, and gravely announced that in going around curves the wheels of an electric car squeaked in high A. She analyzed the bird songs and classified the factory whistles and church bells.

For about six months, Paloma Schramm has been under the instruction of a thorough musician, Thilo Becker. When the child was first brought to his notice, he realized with quick appreciation that she had the artist's soul. Paloma's previous training had not been the best, so it was necessary to begin again at the very beginning. She had been permitted to play things which were beyond her physical powers, and in consequence her hands had been strained out of shape. Careful care and scientific training have worked wonders, and now the child has the true musician's touch, firm and yet delicate, bringing out the possibilities of varied tone-color of the piano. Paloma has frequent lessons, her progress is carefully watched and she never leaves a thing half-done. Her energies are well-directed. She is not allowed to waste her time on the evanescent musical whims of the day, but spends it on things of sterling and lasting worth.

Paloma Schramm practices three hours a day. After that she is permitted to play what she chooses and improvise as much as she likes, her father writes out for her the things she composes. Paloma went with her father to hear Paderewski when he was here. She was so delighted by his wonderful music, that nothing would do but she must go and thank him in person. She insisted upon it, so the day before Paderewski left Los Angeles Paloma and her father went to call upon him in his private car. He received the child cordially, played for her and then asked her to do the same for him. She took her seat at the piano and played a nocturne of the great pianist's own composition. Then he played a little air and asked the child to repeat it. She played it for him just as he had rendered it. Paderewski expressed admiration and told Paloma he hoped he should see her soon again.

The child's situation is fortunate. Her father and mother understand and appreciate her and her development is carefully watched over by a capable teacher, Thilo Becker. She is not sent to school, but taught at home, obtaining good training in both German and English. She lives the life of a healthy, ordinary child, romping out of doors with her little sister half the day, playing with dolls, feeding the pigeons which live in the dovecot, building an entrancing water-wheel, miniature railroad, dollhouses, etc., and climbing up, up to the very top of the great windmill, fifty-three feet from the ground.

MANUFACTURE OF TACKS.

Their Number Raises a Question as to their Disposal.
(New York Ledger): "Where do the pins go?" is a common saying, but when one takes a few notes of the tack industry, the question "where do all the tacks go?" seems to be the next thing in order.

The first tacks were made by hand. The operator used a vice and die. A bit of metal was held with a clamp, and the head was made by striking a blow with a hammer. Later on machinery began to be used, and now metal is fed into an immense apparatus that will cut nearly three hundred tacks a minute. The processes are extremely interesting, and a tack factory has many visitors. The machinery is automatic; narrow strips of metal are fed in and clipped off; the heads are made by pressure, and it literally rains tacks into large boxes placed underneath to receive them. They are then poured into a rattler, which is a rapidly-revolving cylinder, through which a jet of air is forced under high pressure. This removes all of the dust and loose particles. Black lead is sometimes used to give them a polish, and then they pass on to the final stage of the process, which is to be packed in boxes. A good workman can pack 1600 pounds of tacks a day. When one realizes that many of these machines are going, and that tacks at the rate of one being sent out to market, the wonder grows—where all the tacks go.

SIR JOHN MILLAIS DOOMED.

President of the Royal Academy Suffering from Cancer.
(New York Sun): The disease which has for sometime past affected Sir John Millais, the president of the Royal Academy, has been pronounced by his physicians to be cancer of the throat, and they say that his condition is hopeless. The annual dinner of the Royal Academy was this year abandoned, and after the election Sir John Millais was unable to make a speech. It was only the other day, however, that the real nature of the disease became known, and it is said that he may live only for a short time, or, on the other hand, last for a year. The patient is aware of his own condition.

Sir John Millais has of late years devoted himself largely to portrait painting. One of his most recent pictures was a portrait of Lord Rosebery's daughter. In 1894 he exhibited a portrait of the Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone and his grandson, and in 1895 he showed a portrait of John Hare. In 1878 he was decorated with the ribbon of the Legion of Honor, and in 1881 was appointed a trustee of the National Portrait Gallery. A year later he was elected a foreign associate of the Beaux Arts. In 1890 on the recommendation of Mr. Gladstone, he was made a baronet. He married the divorced wife of John Ruskin.

When he's just as sleepy as he can be."

DEEP WATER.

Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast" in regard to the danger of southeast winds at San Pedro, and adding: "If a vessel were anchored out there (indicating San Pedro on the map) on this rocky foundation, or, supposing there was the best kind of holding ground, and if one of these south-east winds rises, how is that vessel to get out?"

To which Senator Frye promptly replied: "She will get out of the way and go ashore."

As to a drydock, Mr. Cole thought that Vallejo was near enough. He then made the following statement, which, to put it mildly, is very far from the truth:

The Times for Huntington.

"Since we left home the newspaper that has been most active and most untruthful in regard to this matter has come out and confessed that nine-tenths of the people of Los Angeles are in favor of a deep-sea harbor at Santa Monica. I refer to the Los Angeles Times."

"Senator Elkins. Has there been that change of sentiment?"

"Mr. Cole. Yes. There was a good deal of feeling out there two years ago in favor of San Pedro, but now they say that there has been such a change of sentiment that nine-tenths of the people of Los Angeles are now in favor of Santa Monica."

"Mr. Cole. I state that and I give as my authority the Los Angeles Times, which so states in an issue of two days ago in its editorial columns."

Of course the Los Angeles Times never made any such statement. The thing like it, the only example of the bold falsehoods resorted to by the attorneys of Mr. Huntington.

Questioner. Mr. Elkins, another of the committee favoring Santa Monica, was next introduced to the committee and made a long-winded introduction, giving a detailed account of the resources of Southern California and the need of a harbor, which would have been just as applicable to a location of the harbor at San Pedro as at Santa Monica, and in fact, appears to have been taken largely from the memorial sent to Congress by the Free Harbor League.

After remarking that in 1886 Los Angeles was nothing but "an adobe city of 10,000 inhabitants," Mr. Mitchell went on to state that members of the Free Harbor League are personally interested in the harbor at San Pedro, and had entirely changed on the subject in Los Angeles. He said:

"But when the River and Harbor Bill was under consideration by the committee of the House of Representatives, and just before it was reported, Mr. McLaughlin, who is now in the city, heard here today, and who represents that district in Congress, sent this telegram to Mr. W. C. Patterson, president of the Chamber of Commerce:

Patterson was elected by a vote of less than seventy-five members.

Senator Vest. Then your proposition is that that chamber, when it voted on the 8th of April, misrepresented public sentiment.

Mr. Mitchell. Yes, sir; if its action can be construed to favor San Pedro, Senator Nelson suggested that a vote might be taken by the people of Los Angeles on the subject, and Senator Elkins asked Mr. Mitchell to suggest that a majority of the people of Los Angeles would vote for Santa Monica, to which the gentleman replied that a majority would vote in favor of an inner harbor at San Pedro and an outer harbor at Santa Monica, which shows, either that this noble young attorney is misinformed in regard to the opinion of the people of Los Angeles, or else that he willfully deceived the committee.

The City Council's Trick.

Mr. Mitchell then went on to show what an enormous mass-meeting had been held in favor of San Pedro, and "something unprecedented in the history of that county." He also, of course, referred the committee to the action of the City Council of Los Angeles in passing a resolution favoring both harbors—a resolution which was rushed through by an undisciplined majority of the Councilmen, who, however, did not have the courage to openly resist its consideration. Of this action, Mr. Mitchell said:

"When the Common Council of the metropolis of Southern California, representing 100,000 square miles of area and 80,000 of city population, interested in the matter, could meet, and in the face of the opposition say that the Common Council of the city of Los Angeles favor the improvement of the inner harbor at San Pedro and the outer harbor at Santa Monica, that I say, is at this time the strongest index of the opinion of the people of that city."

Mr. Mitchell went on to make out that Mr. McLaughlin had been forced into supporting San Pedro, and that the opinion of the harbor at San Pedro, which he had since changed his opinion, whereupon the following colloquy ensued:

Senator White of California. In my opinion there was no Congressional issue on that subject, as both the candidates, on the Democratic and Republican tickets, were equally and avowedly pledged for San Pedro.

Mr. Mitchell. Those who favored San Pedro had used every argument possible to get the people of Los Angeles to bring apparent strength to their position. It was the only way to get the excitement incident to the Congressional campaign to get this seeming expression of favor for San Pedro.

Mr. Mitchell. I will show you that the people want the harbor at Santa Monica. The question is whether Santa Monica is a better place than San Pedro.

After beating around the bush in a desultory manner for some time, Senator Elkins brought Mr. Mitchell up with a round turn by asking: "What I want to get is whether Santa Monica is a better place for Los Angeles than San Pedro. Are you an engineer?"

To which Mr. Mitchell was forced to reply that he was not.

A Crisis is on Us.

James B. Lankershim of Los Angeles, another of the delegation favoring Santa Monica, next addressed the committee. He stated that he had considered it a crisis in the history of Los Angeles, and went on to tell how the sentiment of Los Angeles was very strong in favor of Santa Monica, when he was pulled up by Senator Vest:

Senator Vest. Excuse us, but we would rather hear what you have to say about these harbors, not about public sentiment. We understand that.

Mr. Lankershim. I want to tell you what I am here for. I was elected by the City Council.

Senator Vest. I have no doubt as to your authority to speak for Los Angeles. What we want to know is the best location for a harbor for the whole people, whether it is San Pedro or Santa Monica.

Mr. Lankershim. I should feel very sorry to come here as an intruder. Senator Vest. You are not an intruder.

After this somewhat unpromising beginning, Mr. Lankershim went on to tell how one of his wheat ships had been wrecked at sea, and that he believed the reason was that the vessel had to be loaded outside of San Pedro harbor, because it could not come into the harbor. In what respect this is an argument against San Pedro as a harbor site is not obvious to the average intellect.

Nelson Makes a Point.

Senator Nelson then tried to draw from Mr. Lankershim the admission that it would be better to have an inner harbor and an outer harbor at the same point.

Senator Nelson. It strikes me that it would be more for the advantage of shipping to have, in the same roadstead, room and anchorage both for big ships and for little ships instead of scattering them and having one point around which the big ships and another for little ships. Could it not be more advantageous to have both classes of vessels in one roadstead?

Mr. Lankershim. It cannot possibly be done. All the work that has been done for that estuary has given fourteen feet of water at low tide.

Senator Nelson. You misunderstand me. I say, would it not be more advantageous to have a deep-sea harbor right outside of San Pedro, rather than to have both classes of vessels in one roadstead?

Mr. Lankershim. I thought so for fifteen or twenty years, but after Mr. Lankershim was going on to talk about other things, when Senator Vest again brought him around to the question asked by Senator Nelson:

Senator Vest. You did not answer Mr. Nelson's question. Do you go for an outer harbor at San Pedro, retaining, as a matter of course, this little harbor—which is in perfect order—rather than to have an inside harbor at San Pedro and an outside harbor at Santa Monica?

leading question to Mr. Lankershim. He asked:

"Senator Berry. You worked for years, did you not, trying to get this deep-sea harbor at San Pedro?"

"Mr. Lankershim. Yes."

"Senator Berry. You say now that you have changed your mind, but others have changed their minds. Is not that a change of mind attributable, in a large measure, to the fact that these people have come to believe that the influences here at Washington were so strong against San Pedro that that harbor could not be built? Is it not to the conclusion that it was better to take Santa Monica than none? Is not that fact?"

"Mr. Lankershim. Well, it is somewhat so."

After this Mr. Lankershim told how he had seen ships lying peacefully anchored at Santa Monica discharging cargoes in a gale of wind, which ships, if they had been at San Pedro, would have been in danger of being wrecked, all of which is directly contradicted by the forty-five sea captains whose opinions were presented by Senator White, and who, it is presumable, understand as much about marine subjects as does Mr. Lankershim, and who, in fact, yawns he told the committee are decidedly fishy.

Mr. Lankershim then dilated upon the urgent need for a safe harbor for our big war vessels, some of which cost two or three millions of dollars, and made a plea for the harbor at that ground, whereupon Senator White drew his attention to a statement on the part of the Southern Pacific Company, which stated that the harbor at San Pedro was a preferable place of anchorage during the recent fiesta.

Mr. Lankershim went on with the following, which he probably intended as an argument:

A Weak Argument.

"It has been shown conclusively by the reports of the Harbor Survey that San Pedro is not a very good place for the harbor. Let us suppose that they built a breakwater at San Pedro and one at Santa Monica, and suppose that, instead of giving us a harbor, we have for Santa Monica, Congress should say: 'We will give you that appropriation for the harbor at Santa Monica. What have you got then? You have not got anything but an open roadstead, and a ship has to be discharged here, and lighters are used, and there is not a wharf there. How much would the wharf at Santa Monica cost? A million of dollars. Can you build one at San Pedro? The Southern Pacific Company say that they tried to do it and could not do it. I say, gentlemen, that Santa Monica is a better place; it is the place for the harbor to be.'"

It is a known fact that the argument is all on the other side. Wherever it would cost a small fortune to build a wharf at Santa Monica, an expense that only a wealthy corporation could afford, at San Pedro harbor a small wharf might be run out into the water for the same amount of money.

Mr. Lankershim, with a charming sang froid, then went on to cite the Los Angeles Times and Herald as advocates for the Huntington steel:

"Senator Caffery. Are not the people of Los Angeles divided in opinion as to this harbor? How are we to gather the opinion of the people of Los Angeles on that point?"

Mr. Lankershim. The statement has been made by one of the gentlemen here that he thought that nine-tenths of the people of Los Angeles were in favor of an appropriation of $2,800,000 for the outer harbor at Santa Monica and $392,000 for the inner harbor at San Pedro.

Senator Caffery. Have you canvassed public opinion on that point?"

Mr. Lankershim. The statement came first from the Los Angeles Herald, one of the most bitter enemies of Santa Monica. That was the day before we came here, and the day before we did the same thing. They say that fighting the appropriation will result in our losing the whole thing.

This misrepresentation of the article of the Times as he brazen as that made by Cole and Mitchell.

Mr. Lankershim called attention to the fact that there was a statement in the affidavit of some sea captain that he had rather have Santa Monica than San Pedro, and that he had come into the inner harbor at San Pedro, filling it up with sand. Senator White characterized this as a lie, and said that the fact is that the San Gabriel river does not run into San Pedro harbor at all, but reaches the ocean several miles away.

Mr. Lankershim, who appears to have divided with Mr. Mitchell the oratorical honors of the Santa Monica delegation, then made his argument with the following flight of eloquence, which has about as much to do with the question of whether San Pedro or Santa Monica is a better place for a government deep-sea harbor as an eclipse of the moon has to do with the winning or losing of a game of chess:

Lankershim's Logic.

"Some of you gentlemen have been here; many more have not been. We are trying to raise the dignity of the United States over this Pacific slope. Almost unaided we have raised our city and country right up to the front rank of civilization. The United States. Our city has grown as fast as any of them. Our country produces much more than any of the United States, but we have come the point where we need some recognition from the government."

"When we read the telegram that Congress was going to appropriate $2,800,000 for the one place and $392,000 for the other, we were the happiest men, because we knew that the work was finished. Then came the depressing intelligence. It was like offering a man a cup of cold water, and then saying to him: 'You do not want to do that. You want to recognize the fact that Los Angeles is a growing city, and that that fact is to be a great commercial center. If you ask us why we have this ambition, I can give you no other reason than that we were born in the United States. You gentlemen are ambitious. You are ambitious to be Senators and Legislators. We have but one ambition, and that is to make our city one of the great cities of the United States. And we say to you: Help us by giving us an appropriation of $2,800,000 for the inner harbor at San Pedro and $2,800,000 for the outer harbor at Santa Monica.'"

The testimony of eight ship-masters favoring Santa Monica was then ordered printed in the Record, and Representative McLaughlin presented a number of papers, among which was the following Bunby-like dispatch from Senator Forman:

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 4, 1896.

Hon. James McLaughlin: Under existing conditions my advice to our delegates is to use their best judgment.

CHARLES FORMAN.

And the following, still more so, from E. F. C. Klokke:

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) April 3, 1896.

Hon. James McLaughlin, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.: The harbor question, your own judgment, guided by circumstances.

E. F. C. KLOKKE.

J. H. Director of Chamber of Commerce, F. Q. Story telegraphed strongly urging the acceptance of the two harbors in the following dispatch:

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 4, 1896.

Hon. James McLaughlin: The meeting of the Chamber of Commerce could not be held, but I have had a meeting. It was present, and I earnestly hope you will urge the harbor at Santa Monica, under conditions as set forth in my communication to Patterson, president of the chamber. I believe it to be of great value to Southern California.

F. Q. STORY.

Next came a petition with about two hundred names favoring "both harbors." This was followed by a dispatch from S. C. Hubbell, chairman of a mass-meeting of citizens, in which he referred to the Santa Monica meeting, held in a hall with a capacity of about eight hundred persons, as the "largest mass-meeting ever held in Los Angeles, attended first and last by at least five thousand citizens, with overflowing meetings in streets." The misleading resolution of the City Council was also wired to Mr. McLaughlin, and was printed in the report.

Tables are printed in the report presented by Senator White, showing the number of vessels and tonnage arriving at the harbor at Santa Monica during the year 1895. Also a list of imports through Port Los Angeles for that year, furnished by J. A. Muir, and a couple of articles on commerce of Santa Monica from the Los Angeles Herald. There are also petitions from citizens of Riverside, Long Beach, Pomona, Redlands and other places favoring the free harbor.

L. N. Breed sends the following dispatch to Senator White:

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) April 16, 1896.

Hon. Stephen M. White, Majority Building: The property holders of Anger harbor, few exceptions, favor harbor at Santa Monica.

L. N. BREED.

It was not generally known that Los Angeles that the property owners of the city had held a meeting and authorized a petition to speak for San Pedro, a meeting, if it was held, must have been a very confidential one. Then the following dispatch from J. A. Muir, of the Southern Pacific Company, today another petition, signed by 394 citizens, in which a list of vessels arriving at the harbor at Santa Monica, which came to me unsolicited, reading as follows:

"We, the undersigned citizens of Los Angeles, in the body of a petition for the harbor at Santa Monica, or other improvement that Congress is willing to grant. We therefore urge you to so amend the bill as to include the harbor at Santa Monica. It will contain the appropriations for the harbor at Santa Monica."

It would be interesting to know how many of these "printers, mechanic and workmen" are employed in the Southern Pacific shops. It is known that the harbor at Santa Monica is decidedly against the Huntington steel. The most numerous signed petition for the harbor at Santa Monica, which names, is one forwarded to Senator White by John P. Humphreys and W. H. Workman. In this petition, the signers, who are mostly mechanics, say the most prominent men in Los Angeles, the word "San Pedro" has been changed to "Santa Monica" by the Huntington steel. This is a substitution in the government Printing Office, in regard to which Senator White is now making a strong case. A list of vessels arriving at Port Los Angeles, other than Pacific Coast steamships, is printed.

Mr. Lankershim presented several petitions from outside points favoring Santa Monica. Mr. Slauson was not so certain. He said that some of the committee appear to be in regard to the great preponderance of public opinion in favor of Santa Monica. He doubted whether any one could come within 30 per cent. of stating what the opinion of the people is, and that the great majority of the people are in favor of Santa Monica, then occurred:

White is Not Dreaming.

"Senator Elkins. Suppose you cannot get both, how do you feel in regard to taking one of them?"

Mr. Slauson. I believe in getting all we can. If we cannot get both, we had better get one.

"Senator Elkins. Which one?"

Mr. Slauson. One for Santa Monica Harbor.

Senator Nelson. Assuming that you can get both appropriations, would it not be wiser to go on and complete the harbor of San Pedro on the plan outlined?"

Mr. Slauson. Certainly. Half a loaf is better than no bread.

"The Chairman. I do not know about that."

Mr. Slauson. We do. We have now no harbor except for the light-drift vessels, and that is not satisfactory. The Chairman. If the outside harbor is made at San Pedro, would you advise that the $392,000 shall be used for the inner harbor at Santa Monica?"

Mr. Slauson. No. That is not what I understood the Senator to mean.

Senator White. What is the reason for the appropriation of $392,000 is to complete the inner harbor.

Mr. Slauson. There is also absolute necessity for that. If Congress determines that the outer harbor shall be built.

Senator Nelson. I am aware of that.

Senator Vest. What was the chairman's statement?

"The Chairman. I say that if Congress shall conclude to build the deep-sea harbor at San Pedro, no further expense of $392,000 would be necessary for the inner harbor at Santa Monica."

Senator White of California. I am not indulging in dreams; I am talking of what would be the most advantageous.

Slauson's Admission.

Later Mr. Slauson was taken up by Senator Caffery, who said:

"Senator Caffery. Suppose you had a breakwater at Santa Monica, and you were to content with that and want no other improvements either for the outer harbor or for the inner harbor at San Pedro? In other words, would you take the improvements at Santa Monica rather than the improvements at San Pedro, if you can not get both?"

Mr. Slauson. I think I would. But I think that the government should do both. It requires but a moderate expenditure to improve that inner harbor at San Pedro, and yet we need the deep-sea harbor.

Senator Caffery. Have you not got there all the depth necessary for vessels of light draft?"

Mr. Slauson. Yes.

Senator Caffery. And if San Pedro harbor were deepened farther, would it not still be useless for vessels of large draft, without a breakwater?"

Mr. Slauson. Yes; for vessels of large draft could not get in.

which Los Angeles is jumping toward the ocean, but Mr. Hatch discounted Mr. Cole. He said:

A Two-Ten Gait.

"There is another thing which attracted the people of Los Angeles just as much, and that is our growth in the direction of Santa Monica. During the last ten years that growth has been nearly six miles. Ten years ago the growth of the town was not to any great extent below Tenth street. Now it is one mile beyond the University, and within the last sixty days they have taken in two miles more in the direction of Santa Monica, bringing it within eleven miles of the boundary line of Los Angeles."

Not content with this, in reply to a question of the chairman, Mr. Hatch stated that within the next year we will take in two miles more, and we will continue to do so until we reach Santa Monica. He did not explain why, if we had made two miles in sixty days, it should take us a year to make another two miles. There is evidently an object of these exaggerations of the progress made by Los Angeles toward the ocean, introduced by several of the committee. Mr. Hatch gave as an additional reason against San Pedro, that it was twenty-four miles from Los Angeles to that place, whereupon Senator Caffery said that the distance from Los Angeles to Santa Monica was twenty miles, and that it was twenty-four miles from Los Angeles to Santa Monica.

A Deliberate Mistatement.

This is a deliberate mistatement of the facts. The difference between the distance from the Arcade depot to San Pedro wharf and from the same depot to Santa Monica wharf is not more than a couple of miles in favor of the latter.

Mr. Hatch does not appear to enter into a very favorable line of argument in regard to that town he said:

"Somebody asked about the town of San Pedro. I never stopped there over night. It is the place of about 1200 inhabitants. It is the headquarters for sailors. There is a sailors' inn there. Every person stops at San Pedro over night he will vow never to stay another night there."

It is probable that if Mr. Hatch expressed similar views at San Pedro, those which he ventilated before the Senate Committee, the inhabitants of that town would be very much pleased. The witness repeated his statement in regard to the distance from Los Angeles to Santa Monica, saying that "twenty years ago Santa Monica was twenty miles away from Los Angeles. Today it is only ten miles away."

About Petitions.

He then went on to tell about petitions, as follows:

"Talking of petitions, I will mention a little illustrative incident. Some four or five years ago Mr. Hazard was our Mayor. Some one was speaking about the ease with which petitions could be got up, and there had been a lot of champagne supper that he could not get up a certain petition, but before night he had a petition signed by 200 persons asking the Sheriff to hang the Mayor before sunrise."

Senator Vest. Then we had better throw out all this petition business?"

Judge Hatch. Yes; but Santa Monica is the only place that can be selected for an outer harbor. From what I know of it personally, though not being an engineer, I should say so."

Mr. Slauson here came forward to defend the petition business, and said that the Chamber of Commerce, against a stir that had been cast upon him by J. W. Mitchell, in the course of his testimony.

"In the statement of one of the gentlemen who spoke on our side a reference was made to the reduction of our election and his last one were given. I cannot sit still and not say what I wish to say in regard to the petition business. It is the most respectable, the most trusted, and the most satisfactory president of the Chamber of Commerce that we have had since he has been on the board. He has been recognized as such; and his reflection was a mere matter of form, only a few persons voting. It was a proper form of expression."

Mr. Hawgood testified that an engine of the same weight will draw thirty cars from San Pedro and will only draw twenty from Santa Monica. Also that it would take a grade of seventy-six feet to the mile to come up through the San Gabriel river.

Then A. M. Stephens summed up the matter in the following forcible language:

Stephens's Summary.

There is an absolutely unanimous sentiment among all of our representative men here in favor of the appropriation of $392,000 for the inner harbor at San Pedro; there is no dispute about that. There is some question about public sentiment at Los Angeles. Public sentiment is divided there at present. I believe, candidly, that the great majority of the people there, if they thought they could get an outside harbor, either at San Pedro or at Santa Monica, would prefer San Pedro. For reasons which I have stated and which I will not now restate, there has been a change of sentiment in Los Angeles among some people. Our Representative asked for an appropriation for the outside harbor. It was telegraphed back that we were offered nearly $3,000,000 for an outer harbor, and it was also said that if we did not accept that offer we would get nothing. This was the report that was current there.

Many people said, "If it has reached that point where we will never get an outer harbor at San Pedro, let us take it where it is offered to us by this high power," said for myself, gentlemen, that I did not believe the goods could be delivered, and I have found since I have reached the city that they cannot give us $3,000,000, and that the offer made could not be carried out. There are people in Los Angeles who feel as I did, and I am proud to say that they are numerous. We feel that the people of the county of Los Angeles and of the district tributary to it are entitled to recognition from their government, and if they cannot get it without making an alliance with these high powers, in the name of the people of Los Angeles, I want to go home preserving my manhood. If I learn that nothing can be obtained from the authority except the surrender of principle, I will go home and strike my name from the Great Register of voters. I will surrender my citizenship, and forswear my country. That is the way I feel about it; and many men feel the same way."

The committee then adjourned.

As above stated, a noticeable fact throughout this hearing was that whenever Senator Frye or Senator Jones intervened it was for the purpose of encouraging the advocates of Santa Monica by drawing out further expressions from them favorable to that point, or of discouraging the advocates of the people's side by cross-examination, or by making sneering remarks. In short, these two Senators, especially Senator Frye, the chairman of the committee, acted more as if they were paid attorneys of the Southern Pacific Company than members of a committee engaged in trying to partially discover the true facts in the case.

It is difficult to understand how any intelligent, honest man, after a perusal of this report can favor the harbor site which Mr. Huntington is trying so hard to have Congress substitute for the site there recommended by United States engineers and approved by the people.

The minority report of Senator White will be printed in The Times tomorrow, an official copy having just come to hand.

As above stated, a noticeable fact throughout this hearing was that whenever Senator Frye or Senator Jones intervened it was for the purpose of encouraging the advocates of Santa Monica by drawing out further expressions from them favorable to that point, or of discouraging the advocates of the people's side by cross-examination, or by making sneering remarks. In short, these two Senators, especially Senator Frye, the chairman of the committee, acted more as if they were paid attorneys of the Southern Pacific Company than members of a committee engaged in trying to partially discover the true facts in the case.

It is difficult to understand how any intelligent, honest man, after a perusal of this report can favor the harbor site which Mr. Huntington is trying so hard to have Congress substitute for the site there recommended by United States engineers and approved by the people.

The minority report of Senator White will be printed in The Times tomorrow, an official copy having just come to hand.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY.

BATTLESHIP OREGON IS ON HER TRIAL TRIP.

The Board of Freeholders Discussing the New Charter—The Olive Crop—Growth of the Public Library—Lemon Growers' Association.

SANTA BARBARA, May 10.—(Regular Correspondence.) Santa Barbara has an unusual feeling of security today. The big battleship Oregon is anchored in the channel and is loaded with pig-iron instead of "lead-belts."

The great vessel steamed down the channel this morning between 9 and 10 o'clock and anchored far out beyond the help line. Her bodyguard of two pilot boats and a government tug were lying close by. These, together with Charles Fair's yacht, the government engineers' craft and the many sail and row boats, give the port at least the semblance of commercial importance and make Santa Barbara wish everybody could see her today.

The Oregon made the trip down the coast without a mishap or delay of any kind. Her average pace coming down was 12 knots and on one short spurt she struck a 16-knot gait. Her hullers are entitled to $25,000 for every quarter of a knot in speed developed over the fifteen knots required by their contract with the government, and they are confident of showing at least five extra knots and possibly more. The first trial race for testing her speed will be made Tuesday morning over a thirty-one mile straightaway course and will start about 7 o'clock.

The starting place is off Goleta Point, some eight miles above town, and terminates off Cayote. If Tuesday's tests prove satisfactory to both the hullers and the inspection board, the Oregon will return north Wednesday, as she is still in the hullers' hands and at a heavy expense. The contract time for delivering the vessel to the government is November 1, 1903, and penalties are now due the government from the Union Ironworks of San Francisco amounting to $150,000, but the delay in the completion of the vessel is due to the government's failure to deliver the necessary armor, and as a consequence the government cannot collect any penalties.

The Oregon has a displacement of 10,600 tons and is one of America's largest battleships. She was not built for speed, but to stand steady under fire. Her 13-inch, eight-inch, four-inch and about thirty machine guns. Her 8-inch batteries are protected, which makes her a superior target to other ships with greater displacement but batteries unprotected.

Capt. Charles Miner Goodall, Manager Scott of the Union Ironworks, Admiral Beardslee and a party of sixteen came ashore this morning and after a morning's tending rendered them by the Country Club of Montecito, Manager Freiler officiating.

The freholders met again Friday evening, listened to committee reports and talked. The story might end here were it not for the fact that the talk was not all on the same side of the question talked about. One proposed discussed was to make all city officials appointive, except Mayor, Council and possibly Assessor. Another was to combine offices so as to reduce the number of salaried officials. There were many other propositions discussed and the members of the committee will be fifteen elected to frame and submit a new city charter conclude that they have a job on hand.

The piling idea seems to be "economy," and considerable support is given to the proposition to make no provision for the offices of City Assessor, City Tax Collector or City Treasurer, but to make it mandatory upon the City Council to take the necessary steps in accordance with certain State statutes now in force, whereby the county officials are required to do the work of the officers mentioned. An act approved March 27, 1895, chapter 132, provides that the county assessor, auditor, treasurer and other county officers shall have power by enactment to make and receive assessments and tax collections to be made by the County Assessor and Tax Collector, and the County Treasurer to act as City Treasurer. The committee report now for these offices about $175 per annum. There are always two sides to every proposition, and the freholders are some of them seem to have about five hundred sides. The pile of ideas before them for consideration is voluminous indeed, and the contract which they have undertaken is to decide from these a new city charter which the majority of voters will approve. The various sub-committees report progress, but their progress is almost equivalent to an attempt to wade across the Santa Barbara Channel. They soon strike deep water and are unable to get to which island they will strike upon. Public sympathy is with the committee of fifteen and every one with an idea is gladly furnishing it. The charge, together with full explanation, just to help along the work of making a new charter. When the sub-committees, judiciary and committee of the whole have reported and the proposed new charter is submitted, then the public will report.

COOPER AND HIS OLIVES. Ellwood Cooper is harvesting a big crop of olives. The fruit this year seems to have undergone radical changes. All the oil comes out with the first pressing, while heretofore it has required a second and third pressing, which make second and third grades of oil. This year the oil is all first grade and hence is of much greater value. Mr. Cooper estimates the total output of his orchard this year at 40,000 bottles, which he wholesales at "only a dollar a bottle." Mr. Cooper is talked of for United States Secretary of Agriculture. With this amount of oil on hand he ought to be able to slip in without much difficulty.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY. Our public library has grown, both in volume and patronage, until extensive improvements are necessary. A gallery of iron and steel is to be placed on one side of the building, above the shelves, and will be provided with tables for the use of students. Mr. Rust, who recently returned from Los Angeles, visited the public library of that place while there, and examined the library cataloging system with a view to adopting the same here. The following are directors: Dr. E. B. F. Knott, President; J. M. Short, Secretary, and Directors: J. F. Maguire, J. F. More and G. E. Road.

THE LEMON GROWERS. The Santa Barbara County Lemon Growers' Association, with a membership of sixty-six, has filed articles of incorporation, with 301 shares of subscription at $10 per share.

The purpose of the association is to can, pack and sell lemons and other fruits, in the interests of its stockholders to buy fruit for this purpose. The erecting, maintaining and operating of the necessary warehouses for curing, packing and shipping, as well as acquiring the real estate necessary for the expeditious transaction of the business of the association, are also enumerated. The association proposes to live fifty years and do business with Santa Barbara as headquarters.

SANTA BARBARA BREVITIES. School Superintendent G. E. Thurmond returned recently from his semi-annual trip through the northern part of the county visiting schools. He reports educational matters in this county as highly satisfactory and prosperous conditions. While in the far-away Cuyamaca Valley he came across a botanizing party, consisting of Mrs. Blochman, Santa Maria, Miss Green and Paunlenty of Cuyamaca and a San Francisco teacher. The botanists were having an interesting time copying and reporting the discovery of a number of wild flowers not to be found in books.

There were thousands of people on the boulevard this afternoon to see the great battleship Oregon and her bevy of "small fry" and to hear the band play. This was the first of a six month series of concerts given by the Santa Barbara Military Band under its new management, and days seemed to play as they never played before.

The Local Outing, a monthly published in Santa Barbara in the interests of cycling, says that Flint of Ventura will start in this or next month in a wheel race, and that Fayette Birch, the 100-year sprinter, has been secured for the race. Birch, Howard, Elliott and other cracks, and can do it again.

The steamer Corona is here from the coast with twenty-five tons of freight and sixteen passengers.

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY. Arbitrary Assessments to Begin Monday—Bad Burglars.

SAN BERNARDINO, May 10.—(Regular Correspondence.) Assessor A. G. Keeler will on Thursday begin making arbitrary assessments on the property of citizens who have taken no steps to secure proper valuation. The assessor claims to have information that the Sidewinder mine, nine miles from Victor, has been sold to Oregon.

The County Teachers' Association held the last session of the school year this Saturday, a number of able papers being read.

Thieves broke into the French boarding house on Third street and absconded with $120 from the pocket of Capt. Perrin. Entrance was gained by removing a window-glass in the kitchen.

REDLANDS. May 10.—(Regular Correspondence.) The trustees of the Union High School held a long session Saturday evening, considering plans and specifications for the addition to be built this year. When the High School building was first purchased, it was purchased for the school, but was later abandoned and another site purchased. A meeting of the trustees of the district instructed the Trustees to sell the original site to the best advantage.

A contract was made in May, 1894, with E. A. Taylor, whereby he was to furnish brick for an addition to the school by January, 1896, in payment for the land. His refusal to deliver the brick was extended to April 1, but no brick have yet been delivered on the contract, and last night the Trustees declared the contract forfeited and will probably close a similar deal with another party, who is anxious to secure the land.

Bids on the new structure will be called for within a few days.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY. Judge Dudley Surprised His Friends.

SAN DIEGO, May 10.—(Regular Correspondence.) The news of Judge Irving B. Dudley's marriage to Miss Jennie Kelly at Ventura by Judge Williams, on April 28, just received here, was a pleasant surprise to a large circle of Judge Dudley's friends. At the time this intimated young lawyer made the judicial speech for U. S. Grant, Jr., at the Sacramento convention, few knew that he was a bridegroom of only a few days.

Reports are afloat that oil has been struck in the thousand-foot well at Ocean Beach. Operations at the well are kept very secret, and reports from there are awaited with much interest. No official statement of an oil strike has yet been made.

Rev. Dr. W. F. Day of Los Angeles officiated at the First Congregational Church.

Theodore Gulbrandsen, aged 73, died on Saturday.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY.

RIVERSIDE, May 10.—(Regular Correspondence.) When this correspondence was closed Saturday the jury in the Indian murder case was out, the case having been submitted to them at 11 a. m. Saturday. At 8 p. m. last evening they went into court and reported to 7. Whether the majority will be acquittal or conviction could not be learned. At 10 a. m. today (Sunday) they again came into court and asked for further instruction from the court, and it was decided that the jury would not come in until 9 a. m. Monday, as the jurors stood the same as on Saturday evening. No agreement was anticipated, and the three friends will be given another chance for their lives. Another trial will surely follow. The trial just ended has cost the county about $1500.

Even should these Indians escape their merited punishment, Quaviah will not go free, as there are five indictments against him in Los Angeles, including one for highway robbery, and Martin Aguirre, who worked up the evidence against these men, thinks he has sufficient against Quaviah to send him up for the balance of his life.

ORANGE COUNTY.

A TUSTIN CITIZEN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT WHILE HUNTING.

Klamath Goes East to Establish New Record—Bolsa Farmers Interested Over Right-of-way for a Drainage Ditch.

SANTA ANA, May 10.—(Regular Correspondence.) Orange county's champion free-for-all trotter, Klamath, known among northern and eastern horsemen as "eat-'em-up, Cookie," will leave Santa Ana Monday for the East, to begin the campaign. Klamath will be accompanied by G. H. Judd, his groom, and "Craps," the little canine mascot. The two will go direct to Denver, and from there, in a few days' rest, Klamath will start in a free-for-all trotting race at Colorado Springs on the 29th inst. for a purse of $500. His principal competitor in this race will be "Dandy Jim," the grey ghost of Texas.

Klamath is entered as far east as Elkhart, Ind., which will be the last meeting before the grand circuit opens at Saginaw, Mich. Mr. Raymond may take over Klamath's training, and for the great fall meeting there; if not he will be back here by November 1. Last year Klamath earned $5000 in purses and lowered his trotting record four seconds, bringing it down to 2:38. He stood an excellent chance of lowering this splendid record another second or two, but unfortunately was seriously attacked with rheumatism and had to be brought home.

Enjoying the life of his proud owner's stables here in his sunny southern country, he has entirely recovered from his rheumatism, and making the past several weeks his training time, he is as fit as ever has from his heels before. Although he has not been driven a full mile faster than 2:45, he has clearly shown that he has greater bursts of speed than he has ever had before, and he has yet the horse to meet that will lead him under the wire.

If he is on equal terms with him at the head of the stretch, Klamath is, indeed, great. He is a horse of the future, his admirers here, barring accidents, if he comes home next fall with a record that will at least attract the attention of the horsemen of the world.

Mr. Raymond will also leave Monday for the East, but Mrs. Raymond will go yet for about a week or ten days.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Word was received here this evening that Harvey Rice of Tustin, was seriously, if not fatally, shot today in Santa Ana. Captain Rice was out for some birds for a sick neighbor. He was riding in a cart with Nathan Carmel, a neighbor boy, when his shotgun accidentally discharged, hitting him in the bottom of the cart, the hammer striking on the slats and exploding the charge, which tore down the slats and tore Rice's right arm, tearing away a large portion of the upper arm, and the back portion of his shoulder.

The shot on the side of Captain Rice's head, which was taken by a physician, twenty miles away, was sent for. Mr. Rice is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Rice of Tustin. The father of the victim is a well-known Santa Ana resident and has gone to the mountains to bring his son home. Full details of the affair will be obtained until the parties return.

ALMOST KILLED. Edward Heard of this city came near meeting with a fatal accident just after noon today while he was passing the side of a cow in the West. When directly in front of the stable a heavy screen from the second story of the building fell, striking Mr. Heard on the head and knocking him insensible for a considerable time. It was at first thought the young man was dead, but subsequently he recovered and, later on, was pronounced out of danger.

ORANGE COUNTY BREVITIES. Residents of the Bolsa country west of the river met in the City Hall in Santa Ana Saturday afternoon to discuss the matter of a right-of-way across certain property for the Willows drainage ditch. The principal discussion being over the matter of damages asked by the owners of the property for the Stearns Rancho Company. He finally made an offer to the parties interested as a compromise. The matter was referred to the county board of supervisors, which will probably be proceeded with.

POMONA. A Scholarly Bobo-Sugar Beets in China.

POMONA, May 10.—(Regular Correspondence.) It turns out that one of the two poor, miserable hobos who were sent to jail last week for robbing a money-drawer at O. J. Brown's number office, is a graduate of a big college in New England. On the way to jail the dirty, ragged fellow surprised those about him by drawing from an inside pocket a gray and pattern copy of the ode of Horace in the original Latin and reading them over with an air of satisfaction.

FRENCH PICNIC.

The Annual Outing of La Legion Francaise.

Yesterday was a great occasion for La Legion Francaise. With flags flying and rattle of drums, the members of the French military society marched from their hall on the corner of Aliso and Virgie streets to Main street, boarded the street cars, and on reaching Jefferson street took up their march again to Harmony Garden, four blocks west of town.

There the soldiers of the legion were joined by their wives, daughters, sweethearts and other female friends, as well as a number of men not members of the order, and every one devoted himself to enjoying the picnic with all the capacity for enjoyment of the vivacious French nature.

Harmony Garden is a pretty little place, shaded by huge, white-trunked walnut trees, and well furnished with benches, tables, pavilion, lunch arbors, bowling alleys and dancing pavilions and all the necessary adjuncts of a picnic ground for Europeans.

After every one had familiarized himself with the place and said bonjour to every one else, was time for lunch, which was served on tables under the trees and in shady arbors. Then an orchestra struck up in the dancing pavilion, and every one who had not gone to dancing, the members of La Legion brave in their handsome uniforms with nodding plumes of cock feathers on their helmets.

The event of the day was the presentation of a medal of honor to Roman Grand, a leading member of the legion, a veteran of the armies of France. Capt. Blaude made the presentation speech, referring to the services of Mr. Grand to the legion and his unfailing kindness as the owner of the hall in which the headquarters of the society.

Mr. Grand was awarded the medal with a few words of thanks for the honor bestowed upon him. The medal was a handsome one, hanging from a silver bar by a ribbon of the tricolor was a silver medal, bearing on one face the words, "Presented to Mr. Grand, other, 'Reconnaissance Roman Grand, 1895-1896'."

There was some interesting wrestling and performing on the rings and the trapeze by four young athletes, J. Sentous, D. Tachet, Ed Embert and Paul Carlier.

M. Balet, president of the Legion Francaise, was the president of the day. Among the other officers of the society who addressed the legion were M. Blanchard, first vice-president; Dr. E. A. de Cailhau, second vice-president; F. Ambert, secretary; M. Nicolas Bertrand, J. Sentous, D. Tachet, E. Barclay, S. Leoni, Louis Escallier, P. Parovansal, Dauphine, Deyglin.

SANTA MONICA.

New Fire-Alarm System Completed.

SANTA MONICA, May 10.—(Regular Correspondence.) The new fire-alarm system recently purchased by the city has been put in place, and with a few finishing touches, which will be made Monday, will be fully equipped for operation. The system was manufactured by the Gamewell Company, but was obtained through the Santa Monica Electric and Power Company. The system at present contains five boxes, distributed at convenient points about town. As the growth of the city requires it other boxes will probably be added. The boxes are numbered and marked with the name of the street and California avenue; No. 35, Sixth street and Arizona avenue; No. 43, Seventh street and Arizona avenue; No. 16, Ocean avenue, in front of the Santa Monica Hotel; No. 4, corner Front and Lucas streets, Santa Monica.

The number of taps on the bell at the engine-house, when an alarm is given will indicate the location of the fire. For instance, four taps followed by a short pause and three taps will show that an alarm has been turned in from box No. 43 at Seventh street and Arizona avenue.

Within the box is a clockwork which is wound up and ready to go as soon as released by the pulling of the crank, or clock. This clockwork, when released, causes certain interruptions in the electrical circuit running from the engine-house to the boxes. These interruptions act correspondingly on the electrical apparatus at the engine-house, which later releases the heavy bell, and causes the clapper and causes taps on the bell. The wires running to the several fire-alarm boxes are all insulated so there is little chance for interference from cross-wires used for other purposes.

CITRUS WHEELMEN. The Citrus Wheelmen had a house-warming today at their cottage at No. 232 Utah avenue. Nearly one hundred of them pedaled from Los Angeles this morning, and after riding along the principal streets in a body, repaired to their new quarters, where they were light refreshments. The cottage grounds have been tastefully arranged for wheelmen's quarters, racks for wheels and other conveniences being provided.

STOLE HAY. J. J. Sheekley reported to Deputy City Marshal Elliott Saturday morning that the new Tenth street and Arizona avenue had been stolen. The hay had been cut, cured and bunched in the field, and it was some of this that had been taken. A trail of hay scattered along the streets was followed and it led to the arrest of William Harbark, a peddler from Los Angeles. Harbark was tried before Justice Wells on a charge of petty larceny and was found guilty. He will be sentenced Monday. A warrant was issued for Harbark's arrest under the city license ordinance, complaint being sworn to before Justice Wells as City Recorder by Deputy Marshal Elliott, charging Harbark with peddling without a license.

Can Youth Be Restored?

Has the Spring of Perpetual Energy Been Discovered? Here is a Letter from a Well-Known Jeweler of Los Gatos, California, who has Found a Means of Renewing the Vigor of his Younger Days.

Is there a means of preserving the vigor of youth? Why is it that while some men lose their vital power in middle age, others retain it to three score and ten? Have some old men found a way to keep up the area of animal vitality?

SWEPT OUT TO SEA.

Joe Pasqual Drowned in the Ballona Lagoon.

Joe Pasqual, a figure familiar to all who know Ballona and Santa Monica Canons, will be seen no more, for yesterday the treacherous currents of the entrance to the lagoon at Ballona carried him out to his death.

An old houseboat, known as the Pollywog, long ago condemned, is drawn up on the bank of the lagoon at Ballona, high and dry. Joe took possession of the old craft and turned it into a restaurant. He installed a range, tables, chairs and an array of battered pots and pans and with culinary skill as a concocter of chile con carne and albondigas, administered to the wants of the fishermen, the hunters, etc., who penetrated to Ballona. He had a reputation all of his own.

Yesterday morning Pasqual tried to swim across the lagoon. From the messages which have reached Los Angeles, it is believed he was taken with cramps, went down, and was swept out to sea by the ebbing tide, which there runs swift and strong. The body had not yet at last accounts been recovered. Coroner Campbell will investigate the case today.

Mexicans Who Are Wanted.

It now transpires that Jose Gomez and Jesus Martinez, the two Mexicans who were arrested by Officer Talamantes in Sonoratown Saturday night are wanted in China as well as Kern county. They are suspected of breaking into Blusher & Merrill's general store in the sugar-beet town last Monday night and carrying away a quantity of jewelry and women's shoes. Officer Talamantes picked them up on a description from Kern county and it was found that the description tallied with that furnished the police department by the Chinese officers. A pair of ladies' shoes and a quantity of jewelry was found in their possession at the police station.

HIGHWAYMEN HELD UP THE QUEEN OF THE CYPRANS.

More Particulars of the Daring Robbery West Washington Street. Mrs. Van Gave Up Her Purse but Saved Her Diamonds.

Mrs. Lottie Van, who was held up and robbed on West Washington street Friday night, an account of which appeared in The Times yesterday morning, has been "indisposed" ever since occurrence and has been inaccessible to all who sought for further particulars of the affair. However, Mrs. Van told the entire story to her housekeeper yesterday morning and she repeated it to a Times reporter last night as follows: The woman left one of the road-houses beyond the Rosedale Cemetery Friday evening. She rode in a hack driven by Charles Turney. Just as they were approaching the cemetery two men hoveback rode up behind them. They wore handkerchiefs over the lower part of their faces and one of the men was mounted on a white horse. When they reached the hack they separated, one going on either side of the hack. One of the horsemen drew a brace of revolvers and ordered the hack driver to hold up his hands. He made a dash for it, but was promptly knocked from his seat. The other horseman reached inside of the hack and touched Mrs. Van. She was not in doubt as to the motive of the two men, and thought that by surrendering her pocket-book and getting rid of the highwaymen she could save her diamonds, valued at between $4000 and $5000. In this she was successful, as the robber made grab for the contents of the bag and seized it with such force that the handle was broken off and remained in her hand. The hack driver then jumped upon his seat and dealt the man who had covered him with his guns a stunning blow with the butt end of his whip. The hack team became frightened and sprang forward and the driver was unable to control the horses. The robbers followed the hack until it reached a light wagon and demolished it. This attracted a number of people and the robbers became frightened, turned and rode back. The hack then proceeded downtown and when Mrs. Van's house was reached she left the hack and sent her coachman, Jack, back to the scene of the robbery with the hack driver to ascertain if the pocketbook or safety deposit box keys which it contained, could be recovered.

Madame Van drew $700 from the safety deposit vault early Friday afternoon and taking the receipts of the house for the two days preceding, started out to pay some bills. She reached the roadhouses on West Washington street between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and was then pretty well inebriated. She made numerous trips between Maude Cameron's, the Mundonville, and another roadhouse, and lavished her money on every occasion.

When she left the Mundonville she had $135 in money, as the housekeeper counted it for her.

It is believed now that this is all the money the robber secured and that the remainder of the money she had when she left the city was paid out. Madame Van herself has been too bedridden to state the exact amount she lost. Her befuddled condition is due to the after effects of the soft drinks she had consumed, fast riding and excitement.

Turney, the hack driver, corroborates Madame Van's statement. It is said that he was very much intoxicated the night of the robbery and also that he has been discharged from his position.

Phil Flynn, proprietor of the Mundonville, when asked concerning the robbery, said the first he heard of it was when the coachman informed him a few hours after the robbery.

"Madame was driving past here all Friday afternoon," said Flynn. "She went to the roadhouse above here and back to Maude Cameron's. She stopped here, but I refused her anything to drink and she asked my housekeeper to count her money. The housekeeper did so and found that she had $135."

The robbery has not been officially reported to the police, the housekeeper says, because Madame Van has not been in a condition to do so and because she did not wish to be mixed up in Madame's affairs of that kind.

COUNCIL FORECAST.

Bits of Business that Will be Transacted Today.

The Council will today adopt an ordinance advertising for sale an electric railway franchise, known as the Workman franchise, so-called, because of ex-Mayor W. H. Workman having petitioned the Council to advertise the same for sale. The territory which the franchise is expected to cover, extends from Seventh and Hill streets to the Evergreen Cemetery in Boyle Heights, crossing the river by way of Fourth street. The franchise would have been ordered advertised last week but for a discussion between Mr. Workman and the City Attorney over an unimportant detail having to do with the matter of issuing transfers. This point having been settled during the past week, the City Attorney will today present to the Council the ordinance, ordering the franchise to be advertised for sale.

It is not probable that the hitching ordinance will come before the Council today. The City Attorney has in his office the form of franchise, which will be ordered advertised by the merchants and hackmen of the city, embodying their ideas of what should constitute the proper sort of a hitching ordinance. There are a number of questions connected with this ordinance that will require careful consideration by the City Attorney, and he will not expect to introduce the matter before the Council. Complaint has been made with reference to the ordinance, which the hackmen have drawn up, that it does not include the proper streets, nor extend in its restrictions far enough south. It is also alleged that the hackmen are given by far too much the best end of the case, and as there are other undesirable features in the ordinance they have prepared, it will doubtless take some time for the City Attorney and the Board of Public Works to get the matter in proper shape for submission to the Council.

The Council will today be notified by the garbage contractor of the completion of the new garbage crematorium, and an invitation will be extended the Council to visit and inspect the crematorium tomorrow in company with the Board of Health.

The question of changing the names of all the streets intersecting Buena Vista from Old street to the north city boundaries, will come up today in a petition from a number of property-owners asking that this be done. The Council will refer the matter to the Board of Public Works.

It is expected that the refunding bond ordinance, which was due from the City Attorney's office last week, will be presented to the Council and adopted this afternoon.

Wind

...AND...

Sales.

Wind swells the ships, sails we know. Has wind anything to do with swelling other sales? Of course, in some cases. What makes everybody want to get in a packed hall where there is no room? Only the sheepish desire of the individual to follow the flock over the fence. Shrewd unprincipled advertisers know this human weakness and prey upon it. "We're selling more goods than anybody else," they shout, and the wild and windy cry swells the sales—among the unthinking. But the real test of clothing is in the wear and the fit—the record of our clothing is a record of satisfaction and pleased buyers. The suits on display in our window at $10, $12.50 and $15 will stand the test of wear. Buy clothing with a record—"Sales," is it? Anybody can boast them—But who can prove them?
